Dear Art:

I am saddened by your recent robbery and hope that the experience does not tear up your enthusiasm for numismatics too mucb. Unfortunately even a recovery does not make up for the ordeal.

Having worked for 10 years on a recovery of material stolen by Dr. William Sbeldon from ANS, I am fully aware of the ugliness of sucb situations.

Dear Judy:

In the Coin World of August 31, 1998 there is a release on page 42 about the Brasher Bulletin. We do not have this publication in our library and I think we should. Would it be possible for you to arrange to have a complete set sent to us. A reasonable cost for this favor will be remitted and I believe it would be proper to join the organization to obtain future issues.

I will appreciate your cooperation.

Dear Eric;

This Georgia collection has been so much fun! Thank you for taking the time to help me. I hope I have discovered a couple of new varieties!

I have enclosed photocopies-regular and enlarged with comments on each as to why I sent them.

Also, you mention a counterfeit N.C. 12-1771 2 pound note, but I could not find a description of the counterfeit.

Your book on Colonials rekindled my excitement about currency. Thank you. I look forward to an updated version!

Sincerely,

Judy

Dear Judy:

Your August 16, 2002 letter about the Georgia Colonial bills has been studied and I thank you for sending your comments. You have shown you are a fine student and a careful observer.

The 1776 Georgia unnumbered 6d is a new border variety of that denomination to me. It has exactly the same border as border (b) of the 3d. You will note that I somewhat anticipated its existence by showing that borders (a), (c) and (d) were known. I am changing the description of (a) and (b) borders to clarify the details. There are 22 spiral ornaments on the top border with a colon dividing them 10 and 12. There are 22 spiral ornaments on the bottom border with the colon dividing them 11 and 11. Congratulations on finding a missing link.

The 1776 unnumbered Georgia 1s6d bill seems to be border (n).

I find the orange seal 1776 $1 bills come with both 4 and 5 signatures, the higher denominations I know are all 5 signatures. Again you have clarified a peculiarity.

The Georgia 1777 $5 looks more like border (f) but the signatures mess up the lower border. Please note my general comment about repairing type in borders on p. 139. It could be a different border so I will study it further.

The background of an orange seal $1 1776 being missing was an inking or seal cutting matter.

As to the NC £2 of December 1771 Counterfeit I have no description as often I learn of the existence of a counterfeit from records and have never seen it.

Your delight in studying these intriguing items pleases me. I always learn from people like you who pour over the technicalities. The variations are so normal and yet so complex.

You can guess how much fun it was for me to develop the factual material in the book beginning 35 years ago and seeing the available collections, reading everything on the subject and being helped by so many cooperative people.

May all of your Georgia pieces find an appreciative home and may you find many more pieces.

Please let me know of any further thoughts, findings or questions.

Dear Ute:

I sincerely thank you and Jonathan for sending me the Wolfgang Fischer-Bossert article entitled " The American Gold Bars Again" (Athens 2001) as I was unaware of it.

If you or Jonathan wish you may ask the author whom you know why a particle of clay as an impurity might not result in an analysis which shows pure aluminum after the non-metallic parts of the clay are dissipated.

Our data indicates that the source of the "Franklin treasure" was allegedly in Arizona and that the Mexican bars allegedly came from Florida. This is not what Col. 1, p. 124 seemed to indicate. Our data does confirm that they both appeared about the same time.

Evelyn and I were at the Eberstadt book launch because we were spending Thanksgiving with my daughter's family and she and her husband live in the same apartment building as the Eberstadts. I read his book and he has had an amazing life.

As to your cousin Andre de Clermont, who you indicated was involved in the 1933 Double Eagle matter did he or his antecedents have a previous German name? A family in St. Louis has the name Shoenberg and many of their relatives elsewhere had the name Beaumont for generations. Translations of names to another language happen so often.

The chances of all of the above mentioned coin coincidences arising because of the Eberstadt event are zero, yet it happened.

Happy New Year.

Thrive,

Dear Chub:

I am writing an article on the coinage of Connecticut coppers (1785-89) based upon certain manuscript material which I located in Hartford, Connecticut. Certain facts are missing which might well be in the newspapers of the period. I understand that the University of California has a complete microfilm of the Connecticut Journal published at New Haven and I would like to know if it is possible for me to borrow, for reading, the portion covering the years 1785 through 1789, inclusive. I do not know whether this microfilm is in Berkeley or in Los Angeles but I understand that you have worked on the library matters. I will be fully responsible for it.

In the event it can be loaned through inter-library loan the Missouri Historical Society will be glad to borrow it for me or I could arrange for Washington University to borrow it for me. Would you tell me what red tape I might have to go through to borrow it.

We were over at Claire's and Bud's a day or so ago and they told us about your interesting conclusions that students who get along at college are those who have high I.Q. and emotional stability, and that environment, such as good homes, good high schools, etc.plays a very minor part. This is a most interesting correlation but quite disillusioning for the poor person who is born without the important elements.

Evelyn joins me in sending our best regards.

Dear Eric:

It was a pleasure to hear from you. Unfortunately, I cannot be of any direct help to you now, but I can supply a little information. Two libraries have the film in which you are interested. (It covers the period Oct. 23, 1767 to Dec. 26, 1820). There is a negative copy in our library (i.e., University of California) at Berkeley; and there is a positive copy at the State Historical Society, Madison, Wisconsin. It is probable that you could secure either copy by inter-library loan through the Missouri Historical Society (it is the practice for a library to borrow from a library for an individual); however, I suggest you try Madison first, for it is closer and there is less reluctance to let out positives than negatives. If neither source is willing to cooperate, let me know; in that case, I'll get our library to attempt to borrow the Berkeley copy for me, and then, if successful, I'll mail it to you. Let me mention, in case you have need of similar documents in connection with some other of your interests, the publication of the Library of Congress (now in its third edition) entitled "Newspapers on Microfilm." Most libraries carry this reference work; and it indicates what is on film, and what libraries have a negative or a positive copy.

As you know, Bud is the real philosopher of our family; and hence when we are together we are constantly conversing on and indulging in wild speculations about a wide variety of topics. I do not remember too well the conversation you mention; but I feel sure that if I did say anything like what he reported to you, I proffered the statements as 'how it appears' or just guesses rather than as considered conclusions. Also, it is my guess that there is a very close correlation between 'good homes,' on the one hand, and all the other factors mentioned, e.g., high I. Q., emotional stability, and good high schools. With you, I feel a great sympathy for the poor fellow who lacks the 'important elements': he probably gets nothing out of life except happiness. And if any doubt ever occurs to us about the importance of the 'important elements,' we need only recall the words of J. S. Mill: "Better to be a Socrates dissatisfied than a pig satisfied." (Such remarks are good for stimulating freshmen, but I don't believe that only pigs are satisfied, and I know that most who are noisily dissatisfied are cranks rather than thinkers.)

Good luck on your project, and write me again if you run into trouble securing the film you want or if you believe I could be of assistance on other projects. Give my regards to Evelyn.

Sincerely yours,

Don

Gentlemen:

I am writing you at the suggestion of The American Numismatic Society of New York City.

The Modern Language Department of Wantagh High School is planning to fill a large display case with articles which will increase the students' understanding of the culture, history, etc., of Spain and Latin America, France, Germany, and of the Roman Era. Among the items we plan to borrow are displays of coins, old and recent, of these countries.

Under what conditions could you lend us coins of Spain, Latin and Central America, France, Germany, and, if possible some old Roman pieces?

You early reply will be appreciated as all materials to be displayed should be ready by the second or third week in March.

Thank you very much.

Dear Mrs. Kamitchis:

We are glad to assist you in lending you examples of coinage and would like to know a little more in detail what you have in mind; the number of coins that you wish from each country, and the specific periods that are being studied.

You must realize that Spain, France, and Germany has coinage for over 1,000 years and that Central and South America have coinage for 300 years.

We could certainly send silver and copper coinage for display which would be of interest but feel that students could not read Medieval Latin, and that coinage ought to be confined to the 18th century and thereafter except for the Roman period.

Will you give me your thoughts and you will have our help.

Dear Mr. Newman:

We were most grateful for your prompt reply and for your generous offer to lend us some foreign currency for display purposes.

Mu ignorance in the field of numismatics is vast. Perhaps, hpwever, is I explain what we hope to accomplish, you will have a clearer idea of what we might borrow from you.

The foriegn language department has been asked to arrange a display of items representing the culture of Spain and Spanish-America, France, Germany and the Roman Era in the main hall of the high school. It will be viewed by between 1500 and 2000 students and adults during the first two weeks of April; and I am convinced that many will give more than the usual cursory glance to an attractive exhibit which has as its core the currency of the four language areas mentioned above. I would judge the case to be fifteen or a little more feet long, about seven feet high, about four feet deep, and very well lit.

My thought is that it would be most effective to have a sampling of coins, and , if possible, bills, showing the changes in money from the earliest available examples to modern days (for Latin this could stop with the end of the Roman Era or continue to modern Italy). These samples need not be under any circumstance rare of numerous; for the aim would be simply to present a development panorama perhaps by centuries for each country. And I leave it entirely up to you to decide from which century such a history might start.

Before I burden you further, however, I should ask some practical questions: a) what will be the charge for such a loan? b) how is the insurance problem handled? c) in what kind and size of containers would the currency be packed - loose, and therefore to be mounted by us, or already in display cases of some sort? In the former case, any advice as to effective mounting will be appreciated.

We would, of course, credit your organization with the loan; otherwise the captions in the case would most likely be simply by centuries or periods. The legibility or comprehensibility of the inscriptions on the currency is immaterial since the size of the display case would make close inspection impossible.

Because the case to be filled is so large, I expect to request faculty and student loans of durable items from the four language areas, e.g. jewelry, glass, china, and ceramic objects, and possibly books and dolls.

May I hope for an early word from you so that I may set aside ample space for anyhting you may be so kind as to lend us?

Most sincerely yours,

Your amazing puhlication on Massachusetts colonial silversmiths arrived unexpectedly. I was overwhelmed hy its scholarship, detail and exciting content. I thank you sincerely and congratulate you helatedly on the accomplishment.

Believe it or not our correspondence in 1995 is still in my "open file".

You cited one of my hooks which has had three more editions. I will gladly send you or your lihrary the 4th edition of The Early Paper Money of America if you wish. It has an appendix with engravers and printers of the various paper money issues of all colonies.

Surprisingly I am now writing an article on the misspelling of MASATHVSETS on the Hull and Sanderson Massachusetts silver coinage. I am endeavoring to explain how it happened and why it was never corrected. This is somewhat similar to the misspelling of MATTACHVSETS on the original colony seal. If you have any suggestions or input on the suhject, particularly examples of misspelling or comparative situations I would he grateful. People did not care much ahout spelling in the 17th century American colonies. I will now he ahle to cite your work and draw from it ahout Hull.

I also just published a work on American coin scales and mention a scale made hy Johnathan Dakin of Boston in 1750 and containing his name on an engraved coin chart. I was interested that you mention him as a scalemaker. Whether Thomas Johnson engraved the chart or not, I do not know.

Thank you again for your kindness. It is a pleasure to help people like you.

I am unable to trace the manufacturer of your Higley coin. The 1792 Disme is one of the finest electros I have ever seen and the Clinton is similar to the Betts' copies and might well be onehaving been manufactured by rolling a hot piece of copper between homemade dies.

I am continuing my research and hope to have further things of interest from time to time.

Dear Sir,

Hitherto you received the Numismatisches Nachrichtenblatt gratis, till 1966 from the Hamburger Meseumsverein e. V., since 1967 from me. I am very sorry that I am obliged to restrict further on the deliveries free of charges, which have been made in a great range, to singular cases with special causes.

The costs of print have rised continually with the development of the wages; a new rise is probably imminent for February 1969. Another reason of the increase of costs consists in the augmentation of the size which is necessary to place all the informations about the events in the sphere of the numismatic-primarily in Germany-for the readers. At least, the illustrations indispensable for many reports require corresponding additional expenses.

Consequently I am obliged to be intent on an augmentation of my receipts and the evitation of expenses which are not indispensable. Therefore I beg you to comprehend my mesure; I should be glad to receive your subscription order to the price of DM 9,50 or US $ 2.50 postpaid, which certainly is not too high for the interested circle. If sending by Air Mail should be wanted, the additional postage would to be payed too.

However I am willingly ready to deliver further on the Numismatisches Nachrichtenblatt gratis in exchange with numismatic literature, e. g. periodicals, separate reprints etc. Informations about new issues of coins and banknotes are desired too. Eventually I should be glad to receive propositions from you.

Hoping to hear from you about this matter, I remain

It is one of those strange replicas which brings a nostalgic feeling to everyone in numismatics. It must be a wish that they could have been there to witness the operations. This piece of timber saw some beautiful coinage and witnessed brutal toil which went into its production.

could you please tell me how much it would be worth, how many were made and if it is a U.S. Token I would appreciate your kind help.

Dear Hil:

In accordance with my promise, I enclose herewith a Nigerian threepence, badly off center; a Malayan 10¢ 1961 standard coinage; an upset blank for that coinage, and a cup mistrike of that coinage. I also enclose a blank for some British Colonial piece which I cannot identify for the moment. It would have been coinage at the Mint Birmingham somewhere between 1955 and 1962 and I am sure you can identify it. Let me know which one it is when you find out.

These are presents, and I am sure they will give you pleasure. However, if you have any duplicate Sutler tokens you can send me the equivelent if you feel so inclined.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Eric,

I received your letter of January 17th with the enclosed coins. I am very happy to have these additions to my collection and wish to thank you for your generosity.

At the moment I have only one Sutler token which you may have with my compliments. It is one of the more common ones, and you probably have this in your collection already. However, if I should acquire duplicate pieces in the future, I will be more than happy to pass them along to you.

From: Eric P. Newman

In answer to your inquiry I suggest you consider the following:

Early U.S. Half Dollars which are slightly pinched at two points 180 degrees opposite each other may have been damaged in the Castaing machine process.

The Castaing machine was adjustable for various diameters of coin by the use of horizontal screws or screw clamps which position the mounting bars for the edge dies. These bars are mounted in a mechanism which moves sidewise (back and forth) by a rack gear connected to a hand crank. The two edge dies, one screwed on the inside edge of each bar, are subjected to substantial pressure and heat in being forced into planchet edges to produce incuse edge lettering. Jamming sometimes occurred in the course of rolling the planchet along because the distance between dies became slightly too narrow. Failure to letter sharply could result from the distance between the dies being slightly too wide. These problems could arise from the locking screws tightening or loosening by virtue of pressure and heat from continual use. When the distance between the dies was to be set at the beginning of a run or reset during a run, an available planchet could easily be used as a gauge. As the screws were tightened on the die holding mechanism the test planchet could have been pinched from each side to a slight extent. The test planchet would not be discarded but lettered in due course even though very slightly damaged by the pressure. When the planchet was struck between the obverse and reverse dies the damaged part of the edge would remain as the metal expanded during striking. This might account for the occasional appearance of coins slightly pinched at opposite sides.

I do not feel that any nippers used in automatic feeding of lettered planchets onto the lower die of the screw press could cause such a condition by malfunctioning.

Dear Karen:

I knew you were the type of person who never forgets. I am grateful for your photographs of the $ sign in wrought iron at the Bank of New York, Garden City Branch.

I enclose a photocopy of the earliest use known of the $ sign in the United States, naturally by a Long Islander. Ezra L'Hommedieu was a lawyer legislator and agriculturist born in Southold, Long Island in 1734. He graduated from Yale in 1754 and was a member of the New York Provincial Congresses according to C. Thank you so much for the photograph of the Snider scale.

I notice that there is no slot for a $1 gold coin.

What I really could appreciate is the detail of the markings on the beam and if there are intervening notches on the poise. The weight of the poise would also he interesting to know. Perhaps the scale could he used for foreign gold coin as well if there were additional notches or markings.

Is the curving hand under the slots all in one piece?

Dear Mr. Keepers:

On a visit to Mr. Lester S. Levy, of Baltimore, he told us that you might have available for sale some sheet music which my wife and I could add to our collections. I collect items related to United States coins and currency, and my wife collects illustrations of river boats and scenes and the buildings of St. Louis.

Mr. Levy showed us some sheet music in his collection on these subjects and we would enjoy having any of them if you can help us as he had no duplicates.

The numismatic ones we are aware of are:

"The Dollars" by T.Comer and F.A.Searle (Boston, 1856).

"Green's Quickstep" by F.L.Raymond (Boston, 1840).

"The Musical Bank" (Troy, 1859).

"Legal Tender Polka", by F. Chase (St. Louis, 1864).

"Who Do You Love" by Horwitz & Bowers (Wilmark & Sons, 1898);

but any others you have would also be welcome.

We leave up to you the river boat scenes, hotels, in St. Louis, etc.

We would also like an early copy of Dan Emmett's "I Wish I Was in Dixie" because it relates to a $10 bank note, it is believed. Any 1860 issue in New Orleans or New York would be satisfactory.

Please list the items you have and suggest what you want for them.

Dear Mr. Keller:

In accordance with your request, I am pleased to let you know that the Union Bank of Missouri note which will go in the riverfront exhibit is No. 1338, Plate A. It would be interesting to learn what plate letter is on your note and whether it is also on the branch at Milan.

The July 25, 1861 Confederate note with C.S.A. with a green overprint is a counterfeit produced in Philadelphia as part of economic warfare against the south. You will note how crude the printing is. These had on the margin outside the note a designation that they were facsimiles but most people cut the margin off to try to circulate them.

I hope you find many more treasures in your attic.

Several month ago I spoke with Mr. Henry Grunthal at the American Numismatic Society concerning acetate holders for United States currency. I met Mr. Grunthal recently and he advised me that the Society purchased a quantity of holders with your assistance.

I am interested in purchasing a quantity of these in three sizes, for large size notes, present size notes and for fractional currency. I received a sample from Henry but it is not suitable for me as it is to large. Henry informed me that standard sizes are also available.

I would appreciate receiving several samples if this is possible and prices in quantities of 1000 and 5000 pieces.

Thank you very much.

Dear Mr. Newman,

I very much appreciate your letter of February 21st which replied to one I wrote from my Walpole office on my last trip to America.

My Fugio is presently in a vault in America and is therefore not easily available to me. If it were important for you to have life-size photographs to a high standard, I think it would be better to attempt to get the coin out of the vault and have it done professionally. If there is no particular urgency, I could deal with the problem myself on my next trip to America, which should be April 1st. I am anxious to cooperate with you in any way that I can. Your efforts in the historical research on unusual coins are, by me at least, greatly appreciated. At present I am puzzling out a mystery surrounding 3 of those funny little pewter tokens attributed to James II and often said to tie in with the early history of Florida. Two of these are in somewhat battered condition, although it is clear that they are from different dies. I bought one because its obverse was good and one because of its reverse. More recently I have acquired a third which appears very convincing and is, on the obverse at least, in extraordinarily fine condition. Its reverse is somewhat battered. From all I can learn these coins seldom appear in a condition as good as my last one but do appear in restrikes of various sorts, many of which are virtually in mint condition. No matter where I look it appears as if the only standard work on the subject is a monograph written by yourself. I have searched London and cannot locate a copy and wonder if you can give me any idea where I might buy one for my reference file. After reading it, I think it is possible that I would ask you for some further help in pinning down the specimens in my collection.

Having had a brief experience in the cut and countermarked coins of the West Indies, I am increasingly impressed with the skill of counterfeiters, both ancient and modern, and am determined not to be taken in by a well aged ~~reasonable~~ copy of what I would consider an interesting old coin.

Any help you can give me on locating a copy of your monograph I would very much appreciate. In the meantime, I will look forward to hearing from you about the urgency with which I should fulfil your request for a photograph of my Fugio.

Once again, my thanks for your help.

Best wishes,

Very truly yours,

J.P. Kendall.

Dear Mr. Newman,

Having failed to locate anyone knowledgeable in this part of the world on James II Pewter Tokens 1/24th Real, I have decided somewhat reluctantly to impose upon you and ask once again for your help.

I am sending with this letter enlarged photographs of my 3 specimens which seem not to fall into any particular pattern. In each case one side of the coin is obviously much better than the other, although taken together the 3 coins would allow one to piece together a composite picture of what the coin must have been. I continue to be puzzled by the thought that these coins may be restrikes, but if they are, how could they possibly have become so ancient in appearance without being ancient themselves? Even the best, No. 603, shows evidence of considerable chipping which must indicate that the pewter has undergone considerable chemical change.

If you feel that you are able to shed any light on these coins and if you are able to help me to become better educated, I would appreciate it very much indeed.

Best wishes,

Dear Mr. Newman;

I am writing on behalf of the Keokuk Coin Club who is hosting the 1972 Iowa State Numismatic Convention on September 23rd and 24th, 1972. It will be held at the Holiday Inn at Keokuk, Iowa.

We are wondering if you would accept our invitation to be the Speaker on Sunday Morning at the Breakfast Banquet. Of course, your accomadation for Saturday night at the Holiday Inn will be taken care of by our club.

We would also like to have a numismatic attraction and wonder if you could advise us in this matter. Since this is the first time the Iowa State Show has been held in the southeastern part of Iowa, we are working to make it one of the best.

We would be honored if your schedule permits you to attend our show and know that your numismatic knowledge would add a great deal to our convention.

Dear Sir:

For our library we want a copy of your Maris Revision. We wonder if you are selling to not-for-profit libraries at a reduced price or do you sell it wholesale so that we should get it through a dealer.

If you would rather exchange it for other numismatic books, we would be glad to cooperate.

Sincerely,

Eric P. Newman

Dear Dr. Keyes:

Pursuant to our telephone conversation, I would like you to investigate the possibility of obtaining for Mr. Aaron R. Feldman, P.O.Box 854 Ansonia Station, New York, New York 10023, the medal awarded to your father, Dr. Edward Lawrence Keyes by the American Urological Society, and known as the Keyes Medal. Mr. Feldman is a close friend of mine and expressed a sincere wish for one of these medals by virtue of having been operated upon by your father over fifty years ago. Mr. Feldman, as I am, is a numismatist and that gives this medal an extra appeal for him.

We presume that the dies are still in the possession of the American Urological Society, or under the control of the medallic firm which struck them, or subject to its control.

Your daughter-in-law expressed the wish that if additional copies of the medal were obtainable she felt the family should have a number of extra pieces so that all of the grandchildren could have such a keepsake of their own.

Naturally, Mr. Feldman will pay the reasonable cost of such a medal if it has to be struck from existing dies.

It was a pleasure to have our paths cross again and I hope this investigation will not only not inconvenience you, but will be a pleasant experience for your entire family.

Kindest personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

ERIC P. NEWMAN NUMISMATIC
